WELCOME!

I hope you all had a peaceful start to the New Year and may 2008 be professionally and personally rewarding. I also hope the cold wet winter is leaving us behind, spring is around the corner and we can all look forward to the blossoming of the warmer weathers!

One of my favourite times of the year is Spring time, the trees are beginning their annual wake up call and the spring flowers sprout up offering their wonderful colours in stark contrast to the grey and dull climate of the winter months.

The bright light in the sky is showing more now that the clocks have gone forward, making daylight longer. It feels better knowing that we have more time to venture outside with families and friends. For this is a positive change over for many of us and brings a renewed sense of optimism.

Don’t forget, we would love to hear from you, if you have a story to tell us or tips to share...get in touch!

With my very best wishes to all of you for a wonderful and joyous spring!

DPUK hailed its First Social Evening - A BSL Comedy Show

The BSL Comedy Show, courtesy of Deaf Parenting UK, took place at the Community House Centre in Bromley, Kent on Saturday 16th March 2008. The evening was a success with 75 deaf parents, adults and sign language users who attended from all over London and surrounding. Tickets was a sell out and stand up Deaf Comedian, John Smith, provided the entertainment to the audience, engaging them in hours of laughter, amusements, a fascination insight of being Deaf and the world of British Sign Language.
To the delight of the audience, Raffle prizes also took place after the show ended. Prizes consisted of a Harrods Hamper, Gift vouchers from Marks & Spencer & John Lewis, wristband voucher from Adventure Island, together with small prizes to add to the equation. Light buffet and tea/coffee refreshment was also provided.

Deaf parents were invited to parenting skills workshops hosted by DPUK at Brent Council's Deaf and Hard of Hearing Team.

The provision of the workshops looked at issues such as challenging children's behaviour; co-operation and negotiating skills; family agreements and discipline. The Parent Together programme was developed by Parentline Plus, as part of the joint partnership with DPUK.

The workshops were held every Friday morning for 5 weeks and 7 parents attended. Throughout the workshops, the deaf parents met with other deaf parents and found out about help and support available.

Deaf Parents/Adults and Sign Language users – during the interval

A jolly fun night out for all, which goes to show how important is for deaf parents, deaf adults and sign language users to interact within the deaf community.

Many thanks to Nicole Campbell, DPUK Coordinator and a handful of volunteers for their hard work and support in making the event successful!

Deaf Parenting UK & Parentline Plus - Joint Parenting Together Course, January 2008

Brent Councillor Reg Colwill, Lead member for Adults, Health and Social Care paid a visit on the 1st session and commented “This is an excellent opportunity for deaf parents to pick up extra expertise in parenting. Deaf parents have varying needs; they can be a single mother or father, with hearing or deaf children, have step children or be a foster carer”

The parents were saddened when the course came to an end, but they have benefited a great deal and it is hoped that they continue to put the use of the skills learnt into practice with their family.
Espanol Christmas Festival

At 16:30 hours, the Christmas Asoch 2007 festival was held for deaf children and families from the Partners deaf children Foundation. There were several surprises, including inflatable game slides, gifts from Santa Clause. The joy was among children, youth and adults. It is a custom that ASOCH did this kind of event in advance so that deaf people can celebrate a festive Christmas with families and friends.

No to ‘Deaf’ Embryo’s

A deaf couple in London are trying for another baby, but trying for this baby has put them in an unusual fight. Both parents were born deaf and their first child is deaf.

The possibility that the mother in question may possibly have to have IVF and both parents want their second child to be deaf as well. Thanks to the modern genetic testing in IVF, this is a possibility but it has sparked a national debate over embryo selection.

A new fertility bill going through The House of Parliament scheduled to take place this spring could mean it would be illegal for deaf Briton to choose deaf embryo, in other words - embryos used in IVF treatment would be rejected if the child would be born deaf.

The Londoners are determined to challenge the House of Lords on the traditional concept of disability.

Should deaf parents be allowed to select an embryo that has a deafness gene in favour of an embryo with a hearing gene?

Send in your views/comments to DPUK.
Family Fun Events in London

Seventeen children attend the Arts and Craft event - January 2008. A fantastic opportunity for the children to express their creative side, whilst exercising their imagination. Children between the ages of 3 – 10 years were encouraged to participate in the creative and fun Arts and Crafts session, held at Mycenae House, Blackheath on Saturday 26th January 2008.

The session involved in using materials such as painting, colouring, laces and strings, plasticines, beads and things etc. With the combination of these materials, the children were able to let their imagination run wild and produce some pieces of artwork.

The children had such an enjoyable time and it is fantastic to see their immense satisfaction with the finished article.

Drama Workshop, February 2008

Seven children enjoyed BSL Drama workshop led by Mary-Jayne Russell de Clifford, a qualified Drama Tutor who particularly specialises in working with deaf people with mental health, young people with learning difficulties and children with additional needs.

The workshop was full of fun and engaged in various activities throughout the afternoon with warm-ups, games, creative time etc.

17 children at the Azelia Hall in Beckenham, Kent, enjoyed a free Tea Party on Saturday 29th March, courtesy of Deaf Parenting UK.

The children participated in making fancy Easter baskets, using arts and craft materials decorated with yellow chicks and topped up with mini chocolate eggs.

After the Easter baskets were completed, a children’s light buffet consisting of raw vegetable such as sliced carrots, celery and cucumber, fresh fruits, teacakes and orange squash was provided for the children and their parents.
Mums and Dads stayed and chatted with others and volunteers helped make tea & coffee for other deaf parents.

To the delight of the children, a traditional Easter egg hunt was set up with the eggs hidden in and around the hall. The children were already fast on the trail to hunt for their Easter eggs!

The hunt was a great success as it took over half an hour for all the kids to find their eggs and all had a good time.

The 'Bromley Deaf Families' self-run group has gone under the Deaf Access umbrella, now renamed as Deaf Access Families. The change has enabled the self-run group to obtain more support from Deaf Access, Family activities are now co-ordinated with Parents & Toddlers and other events organised through Deaf Access. Events now seem to be available for all Deaf Families in South East London and beyond, not limiting to those living within the Bromley borough.

Deaf Parents take turns to host each month's event (either a Saturday or a Sunday). For more details, check Deaf Access' online calendar at www.deaf-access.co.uk (Scroll to 'Upcoming Events'). Or send an E-mail to deafaccessfamilies@yahoo.co.uk

Debate: MMR, (December 2007)

We respect each parent to his or her choice on this hotly debatable MMR vaccine (or separate single vaccines). However I would like to say that all our three children have been given MMR and there has been no problem, apart from the usual 'fever tiredness' bouts that may follow any vaccination. Our young son is growing well. Before giving our first child the MMR shots, we spent a lot of time checking various sources on the Internet as well as medical articles. And strongly believe that there is no link between MMR vaccines and autism. Due to this MMR controversy, the number of measles and mumps cases has gone high in UK. Which is sad for all those families involved as these are quite nasty to have.

A London hospital announced further details of no linkage (Feb 2008). For details, click on the link http://news.bbc.co.uk/1/hi/health/7226763.stm

Andrew Niklaus, Bromley

Let your baby discover his new world with Amby! (December 2007)

We were thrilled to see an advertisement in your newsletter's last issue - about 'Amby Natures Nest'. We can highly recommend this to other Deaf Parents, having used this baby hammock successfully for all our three young children. What we really like about it is that we had no fear of 'sudden cots death syndrome' due to the hammock design - making it impossible for babies to sleep on their fronts. Another benefit to us, being "so tired" parents of a new baby, was that whenever our baby was restless - their baby feet kicking would rock themselves to sleep. We hardly ever take our baby out at the middle of the night for comfort! We are now selling our used 'Amby Natures Nest' for a low price - contact niklaus@auslan.plus.com or text 07747 771 040 if you're interested in buying it.

Choosing Secondary schools - how did you decide which is best for your child?

Primary and Secondary school is an important time for education for all children. Not knowing where to find the information you need can be very frustrating and the process of choosing secondary school is daunting and time consuming. I found that starting my preparation and planning early helped me make a well informed choice.

I also felt the need to do my own research and finding out information from other parents in order to feel comfortable about making a decision.

Having done my 'homework', I selected 3 different secondary schools in order of preference and was thrilled to find out that my child was offered a place of 1st choice of school that I had selected, I feel really lucky as I understand the school is one of the most reputable schools in the locality.

Following the transition, my child has settled in nicely and so far, doing well in his schoolwork.

Names have been withheld on request

Tips on choosing schools:

Gather information as early as possible, with the help of other parents, friends and families, professionals working with schools etc so that you can plan school visits and make applications on time.

Contact your local authority for information about schools in your local area and surrounding.

Do some research - read individual school prospectuses, achievement, attainment data and Ofsted reports. Check out the websites - Dfes (Department for Children, Schools & Families) and Directgov, which has a wide range of information relating to education.

Ask yourself which of the schools would best meet your child’s needs and plan a visit to the school with your child, to get a feel of the place and meet with children, teachers and staff etc.

How Deaf Aware are your children’s School?

I am a deaf single mother, who attended one of the parenting skills workshops arranged by Deaf Parenting UK in late 2006.

I expressed my concerned about the situation with my daughter’s school exclusion to the facilitator of the workshop. My child had not been in school for almost 4 months, whilst awaiting placement at another school, but after several times of trying to contact the school to find out what was happening, I was left frustrated at not being able to get through to either schools.

I was not fully clear why my child was excluded from school, my eldest daughter who also attended the same school as her young sister informed me that the school told her to tell me the news verbally about the exclusion - no letter or other way of communication to inform me of this directly!

I have to admit that I did not have a good school/parent relationship with this school as I felt that they did not know what or how to deal with me as a deaf parent. I have very little concept of English and my first language is BSL, the school did nothing to encourage me and to top it all, the school was using my young daughter for communication support, which I realised by rights should not have taken place because my child was only 13 years old and traumatised by the whole situation surrounding the exclusion.

Following the advice and support of DPUK, I then contacted the Exclusions Officer at the local council and made a formal complaint. As a result of an investigation, it was clear that the exclusion officer was horrified and that the school had failed to meet all regulations and guidance of the exclusion policy.

My daughter has since been reinstated at the same school. The school has also been issued with a copy of the guide ‘Schools working with Deaf Parents’ for education professionals, aimed at helping teachers and staff in education to work effectively with deaf parents and their children. To this date, the parent-school relationship has somewhat improved and I feel more encouraged to be involved in my child’s education.

The ‘Schools working with Deaf Parents’ guide is available in large and standard print; it is deaf-led and endorsed by Deaf Parenting UK

Worried about your teens peer pressure?

As a parent, I frequently wonder what I can do to keep my teenagers from being influenced by peers but that can be difficult as teenagers tend to experiment, which helps them gain access to certain social privileges.

I am a parent with three teenage children, two of whom are boys of 19 years and 15 years.

I am not perfect but I did my very best to bring them up in a stable environment – however, both my boys have been influenced by peers; the eldest through drugs and the youngest with Anti Social Behaviour issues.

Being a successful parent to teenagers is not as easy as you think, especially associated with adolescence, but the fact remains to try instil a good, healthy relationship and great communication.

My eldest boy has just left home, and is to become a father for the 1st time, I pray everyday that he will turn the corner and be a positive role model for his newborn child.

My youngest son is a force to be reckon with, he was a model child up until he started 2nd year of secondary school and then completely changed. My confidence hit rock bottom, as there was a lot of tension and hostile atmosphere in our home.

My son’s continuous trouble with the police has sent me into a spiral depression, but I am fortunate to have the support of the children’s father – who has been actively involved in their lives. I have wondered time and time again whether I could have done more in minimising their time spent with their peers in youth clubs, hanging out on the streets etc.

Having said that, with the support of various parenting organisations, I have since learnt to regain control by dealing with my son’s feelings in order to support him and build an awareness of what teenagers need from a parent and what we can do to help meet those needs.

I have a close relationship with my young daughter who is about to turn 13 years old. I would be lying if said that I have no cause for concern about her future well-being – there is so much pressure about image today, which goes through teenagers and adding to their anxieties. I just have to deal with things one step at a time.

L. White, Torquay

Upcoming debates:

- IVF (In Vitro Fertilisation) – What are your views on House of Lords decision on rejecting deaf embryos in favour of hearing embryos?
- Concerns about the difficulty in helping your child with homework?
- Concerns about your teenage social network such as Bebo, Facebook, Tagged, the dangers and risks of their profiles being exploited?

We would welcome your views...please feel free to share them with DPUK
